We appreciate all of the efforts of the GCF Secretariat to secure a strong replenishment! As we have reiterated, the climate finance needed to address the climate crisis is immense, and particularly urgent in this key decade for implementation. The GCF must receive a strong replenishment in order to provide the critical finance that developing countries need to achieve crucial mitigation and adaptation goals in alignment with their country needs and priorities, recognizing the particular role the GCF plays in providing adaptation funding at a time when adaptation remains underfunded globally.

It is imperative that developed countries live up to their obligations and ambitiously replenish the GCF to enable the Fund to continue to provide critical finance to those who need it most, and to implement rights-based, gender-responsive climate action in line with the new USP.
